

thunderer *is in the geography of the edge:
where ideal frames and limits
like the map, the time, the law and the thought of the square, meet those of the residence established as the door, the window or the road in.
In the square one could find kinship or respite against a tree in sleep and insistent daydream
interrupting some personal edge or another.
Egress is ingress is . . .to wander the green . . .
to garner the next thing
while the other thunders distantly.
